preachers over an audience, which may result in a just discrimination between the influence which each wields and the sources of it. The preacher is didactic, the actor dramatic; the preacher inculover-much upon the ornaments or rhetoric or the resources of oratory rhetoric or the resources of oratory, and he cannot in most churches call to his aid any art save music. The actor appeals to an 'audience through every sense, and may use every adjunct that elocution, scenery or dress can offer. The main object of the preacher is to convince the judgment, and the main object of the actor is to touch the heart. It is only that insincere, ornate, emotional kind of preaching which might be classed under the head of what Aristotle calls "orating for display," that can be properly compared head of what Aristotle calls "orating for display," that can be properly compared with acting. That style of preaching is essentially theatrigal in its character, and is popular for that very reason; for many people who would shudder at the thought of going to a theatre, at-tend church simply to have their sympathies excited by polished deer lamation, or their admiration roused by listening to fine thoughts poetically expressed, it must be acknowledged that the theatrical preacher is but a poor crea-ture compared to the actor, for he works at a great disadvantage, and is therefore the theatrical preacher is but a poor creature compared to the actor, for he works at a great disadvantage, and is therefore comparatively powerless. To illustrate the truth of this statement, the reader need only recall the number of times that the has seen a crowded theatre rippling with laughter, thrilled to tears, or husbed in breathless awe before a well noted comedy, melodrama or tragedy. Smiles and tears are not rare in any theatre in the city. In how many of our churches is the granulest tragedy of religions opicured as to move the congregation to weeping? What the trained eloquence of some of the ablest orators in the world cannot do, the rude representation of the peasants of a German village is power-mil to effect; and travelers who have listened unmoved to the best preachers of the age confess that they could not leave the trained of the gae confess that they could not leave the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the gae confess that they could not leave the second of the second of the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the second of the page confess that they could not have the second of the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the page confess that they could not leave the second of the page confess that they could not leave the trained of the page confess that they could not leave the trained of the page that the trained of the page to the trained concern annuement of the time the time the time that the trained of the same to the time the trained of the page to the trained to do the page to the trained to the page to the ful to effect; and travelers who have listened unmoved to the best preachers of the age confess that they could not look upon the great theme of all preaching as represented in the passion play acted every ten years at Ober-Ammergan without the deepest emotion. The talk of the Democrat that the Courier would prosecribe faithful representatives for doing the bidding of their constituents is the merest bosh. No man of intelligence in the Democrat's neighborhood, believes the people of that country wanted the Capital at Wheeling, and no representative who voted to put it there can plead the will of his people in extenuation of his partnership with the Radical party in doing so.

Earthquake Shocks.

Manhattan, Ks., November 8.—A very distinct shock of an earthquake was felt here at five o'clock this morning. It is described as a succession of slight shocks by some and by others as a motion similar to that of a hopper in a mill. The agitation seems to have passed from east to weat, though a few say from the south to the weat, and was accompanied by a heavy, dull, rumbling sound. Buildings were considerably shaken and the inmates in some cases much alarmed, but no damage was done. The shock was followed by a light rain, which continued for ten hours.

Sr. Louis, November 8.—The Republican's Kansas City special says that that section of the country was considerably startled, about 4 o'clock this morning, by a shock of earthquake. There seemed to be two distinct shocks and in some places the vibration caused people to get out of their beds to see what was the matter. Whisky Suits in St. Louis.
Sr. Louis, November S.—In the United States District Court to-day, Petit was sworn in, after which J. R. Jewett, against whom two indictments are pending, for conspiring against the government and defrauding the government, withdrew a plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty to both indictments. The grand jury made a partial report, returning indictments against the two parties already indicted for whisky frauds, but their names have not yet transpired. A capias was issued for A. M. Everest, a Government gauger, who absconded after being indicted last spring, but who, it is now understood, will return and plead guilty.
